

Revere Copper: American history is OUR history.

In its earliest days, America relied on our founder, Paul Revere: Revolutionary War hero, Founding Father and visionary metalworker. A pioneer in the production of rolled copper, he established the nation's first copper mill in 1801, and we are proud to continue his manufacturing expertise and patriotic spirit to this day, 225 years later.

It was a $10,000 loan from the U.S. government that led to the original Revere copper rolling mill, whose initial role was to serve the U.S. Naval fleet, starting with the USS Constitution.

Our government – then under President John Adams – valued the importance of domestic manufacturing as a crucial component of national security.

Today, the employee-owned Revere Copper Products, Inc. actively serves industrial markets including architecture, telecommunications, industrial machinery, power distribution, electrical, HVAC and national defense, with more than 1,000,000 square feet of manufacturing space in Rome, NY and Mebane, NC.

One of our goals is for the entire copper supply chain to prosper and employ people with good wages and the ability to retire with dignity.

Not only was Revere America's first copper rolling mill, the company now stands as the last remaining copper mill with private U.S. ownership.
